stock market created much interest in Washington, if it did not catch some of the local buyers of securities on the long side of the market. In the early part of the day, when the onslaught started upon the Interboro shares interest became intense about the tapes in all the local brokers' offices. Later, when the bears attacked Hocking Coal and Iron and drove the common stock of that company down more than 50 points, and when the general list began to crumble everybody wondered whether a veritable cyclone had not struck Wall street. Men here hung about the tapes, watched the figures go up on the boards, and could not understand the cause of it all.
